Bowman Sculpture (stand 181) present works spanning nearly 200 years from 1833 to present day at TEFAF Maastricht 2025.. The Bowman Sculpture presentation at TEFAF Maastricht will spotlight 100 years of Art Deco, female artists and rare 19th century pieces.

About

To mark the centenary of Art Deco, the display will include key works such as Attilio Piccirilli's Flower of the Alps (1917), Richard Garbe's The Red Shawl (1928), and Boleslas Biegas's The Wave (1907). These pieces reflect the movement's characteristic geometric precision, rich materials, and lasting influence on modern art and design.

The exhibition will also highlight key works by female sculptors, showcasing their influence on modern and contemporary sculpture. Sarah Bernhardt's Autoportrait (c. 1885) offers a rare glimpse into the artistic side of the legendary actress, capturing her distinctive presence in plaster. Kim Lim's Untitled Relief (1995), a minimalist slate composition exploring form and texture, gains added significance following her recent retrospective at the National Gallery of Singapore. Lim, a pioneering modernist and wife of sculptor William Turnbull, blended Eastern and Western influences in her work. Helaine Blumenfeld OBE's Messenger of the Spirit (2006) exemplifies her signature organic forms, exploring movement, light, and transformation. Meanwhile, Dame Barbara Hepworth's Three Forms (Winter Rocks) (1965) reflects her ability to distil natural rhythms into pure, abstract forms.

Bowman Sculpture are honored to present these striking and unique works, each reflecting the distinct vision and mastery of its creator. This selection features four female artists from four distinct periods, each contributing to a major artistic movement—Sarah Bernhardt's Autoportrait (c.1885) from the Beaux-Arts tradition, Barbara Hepworth's Three Forms (Winter Rocks) (1965) representing modernist abstraction, Kim Lim's Untitled Relief (1995) embodying minimalist and post-war sculptural innovation, and Helaine Blumenfeld's Messenger of the Spirit (2006), which continues the tradition of contemporary organic abstraction.

The fair presentation will include four new works by Italian rising star Massimiliano Pelletti, whose innovative approach to sculpture bridges classical traditions with modern conceptualism. Pelletti's pieces often explore themes of cultural hybridity and material transformation, challenging perceptions of beauty and history. His inclusion in the fair follows the success of his recent museum exhibition, Versus, held at the Palazzo Massimo in Rome. For this groundbreaking exhibition, Pelletti became the first contemporary artist invited to create works in dialogue with the museum's collection of antiquities. His creations were presented alongside Roman and Greek masterpieces, furthering a compelling conversation on cultural hybridity and the enduring influence of history.

The Bowman Sulpture booth at TEFAF Maastricht will showcase a carefully selected display of masterpieces from the 19th century to the present day, featuring iconic works by renowned sculptors. Highlights include Alfred Boucher's Diana or Artemis (1891-1894), a graceful representation of classical mythology and feminine elegance, followed by Auguste Rodin's L'Éternel Printemps (Eternal Spring), 1st Reduction (conceived in 1884, cast in 1907), and Le Baiser (The Kiss), 1st Reduction (conceived in 1886, cast in 1912), which capture the fluidity and passion of human connection.

Émile Antoine Bourdelle's Herakles the Archer, 8th Study (conceived in 1909, cast before 1920), showcases the artist's ability to blend classical themes with modernist energy. Moving into the 20th century, a selection of works by Henry Moore will be featured, highlighting his innovative approach to form and abstraction. Finally, William Turnbull's Large Siren (1986) will be displayed, a testament to the enduring evolution of sculptural practice into the late 20th century. These works exemplify the technical skill and emotional richness of sculpture across two centuries, reflecting Bowman Sculpture's commitment to preserving and promoting this transformative period in art history.
