

Bowman Sculpture presents retrospective of Dutch sculptor Hanneke Beaumont and premieres ‘Duality’ sculpture

By LDN Guest Post

16 June 2025

5 minute read

Bowman Sculpture is presenting a retrospective exhibition of Dutch sculptor Hanneke Beaumont from 19th June to 25th July 2025. ‘Hanneke Beaumont: Sculpting the Universal Self’ celebrates over three decades of Bowman Sculpture’s collaboration with one of Europe’s most contemplative and quietly radical sculptors.

‘Hanneke Beaumont: Sculpting the Universal Self’ explores themes of identity, shared humanity, and emotional resonance through Dutch Sculptor Hanneke Beaumont’s distinctive sculptural language. Bowman Sculpture will reveal for the first time Beaumont’s most recent monumental sculpture “Duality”, which comes to the gallery in Mayfair directly from the foundry in Pietrasanta, Italy.

Beaumont’s practice—rooted in classical materials such as terracotta, bronze, and cast iron—reimagines the figurative tradition for the 21st century. Her androgynous sculptures—neither male nor female, neither young nor old—eschew specificity in favour of emotional truth. With quiet power, they explore vulnerability, resilience, and the complexities of being human. Beaumont’s figures defy traditional categorisation. They are neither culturally specific nor geographically fixed. These bodies are purposefully ambiguous—unbound by labels or expectations—and yet they feel profoundly familiar. This is sculpture not of a person, but of the person: human, introspective, unresolved, whole.

Hanneke Beaumont comments:

“Many years ago I was asked by a very nice, handsome, young and sculpture loving couple in London to join their gallery on Duke Street. Their daughter Mica was still a very little girl. They had seen my work in New York and were thinking about taking a new step into contemporary sculpture alongside their XIXth Century modern artists. Because of their great enthusiasm I immediately said yes, even though I felt it a bit strange to be a living artist among so many – albeit great – dead ones. From then on, we have had years of a successful and great cooperation. Thinking back to that day we started, I am very happy I said yes. I am now proud and pleased to let Bowman Sculpture gallery have the premiere and first edition of my most recent monumental sculpture titled “Duality”. It came straight from the foundry in Pietrasanta Italy. It is truly an important work to me personally as it expresses the feelings I experience in moments of difficult choices. I believe these feeling can be universal. I thank Bowman gallery for all those years of successful representation in London and on many important art fairs throughout the world.”

Beaumont’s sculptures capture the zeitgeist of an era when conversations around identity and belonging are more visible and more urgent than ever. Her work offers a quiet, essential perspective. As she puts it, “I represent the human being, regardless of where they are from, who they are or what they do. I believe some feelings are universal to mankind and wish to express these.” Her work gently proposes that identity is not a rigid concept but a shared, evolving space—one in which we can all find reflection.

Mica Bowman, Director of Bowman Sculpture, comments:

“Hanneke’s sculptures refuse to tell us who or what we’re looking at—and that’s their power. In a world often obsessed with definition, her figures invite us to pause, feel, and connect without needing to categorise. They offer a rare space of reflection, empathy, and shared experience. Hanneke’s sculptures offer a vital perspective in our current cultural moment. They resist the urge to define or categorise and instead present the human being as a shared idea—fluid, imperfect, and innately connected.”

Among Hanneke Beaumont’s most recognisable public commissions is Stepping Forward, permanently installed outside the European Council in Brussels, an emblem of quiet determination and unity. Museum acquisitions include Le L’Ennu(The Baker Museum, FL), Installation 56 (Boca Raton Museum, FL), Melancholia II (Copelouzos Museum, Athens), and No.130 (Observing), now permanently situated at the entrance of the Racine Murphy Museum of Art at the University of Notre Dame. The latter stands as a symbolic guardian—its reflective presence inviting contemplation at the threshold of one of America’s newest art institutions.

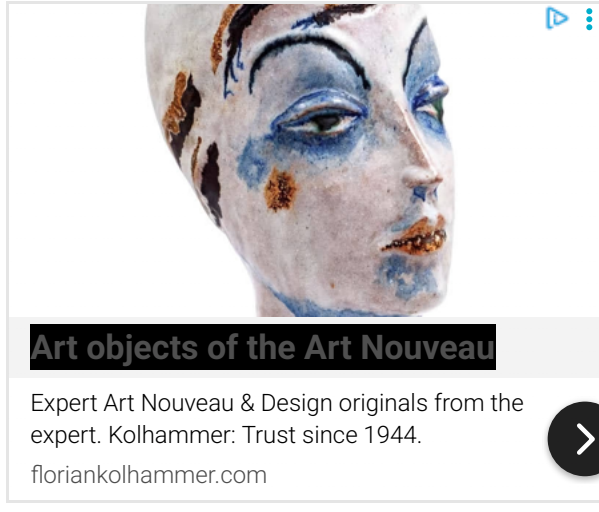

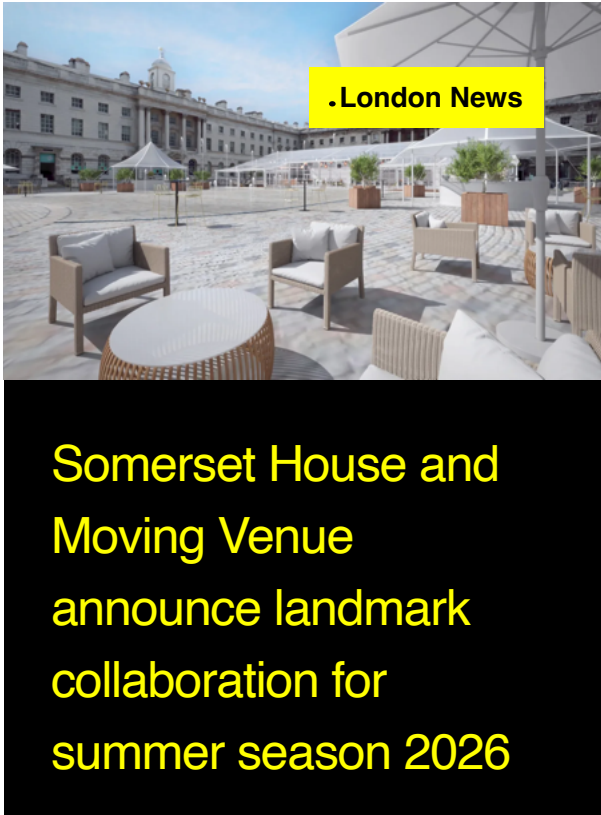

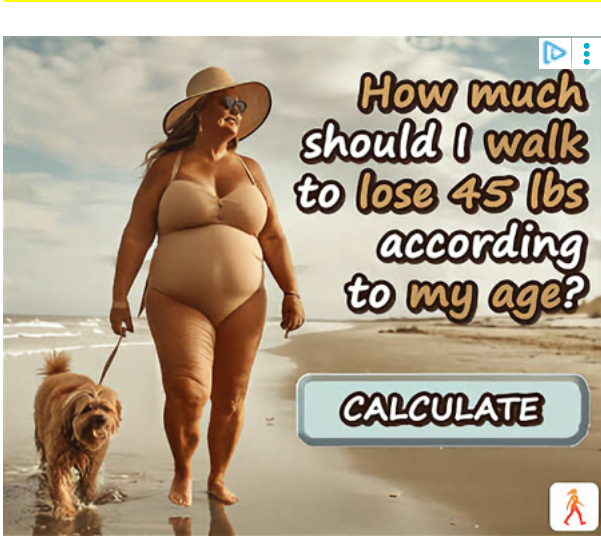

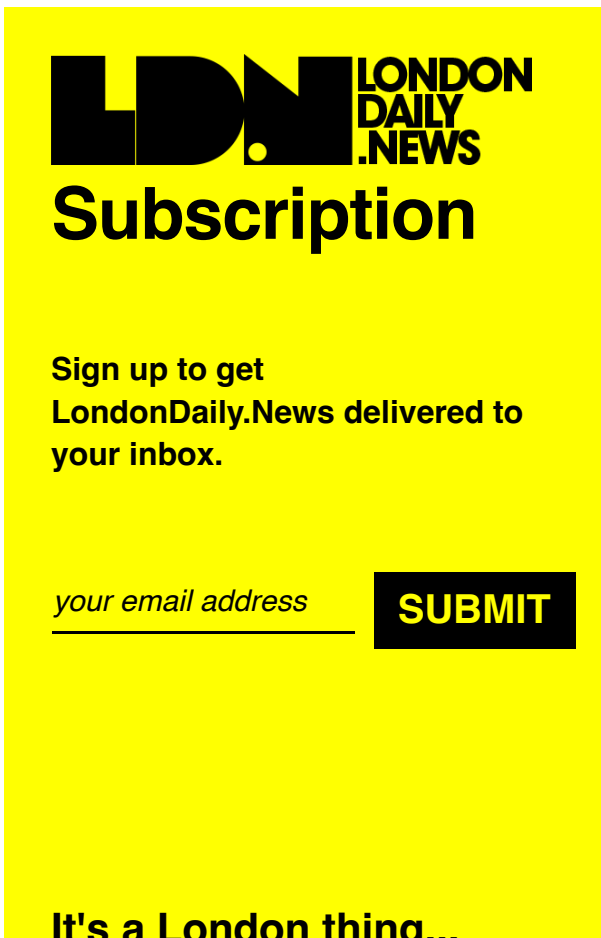

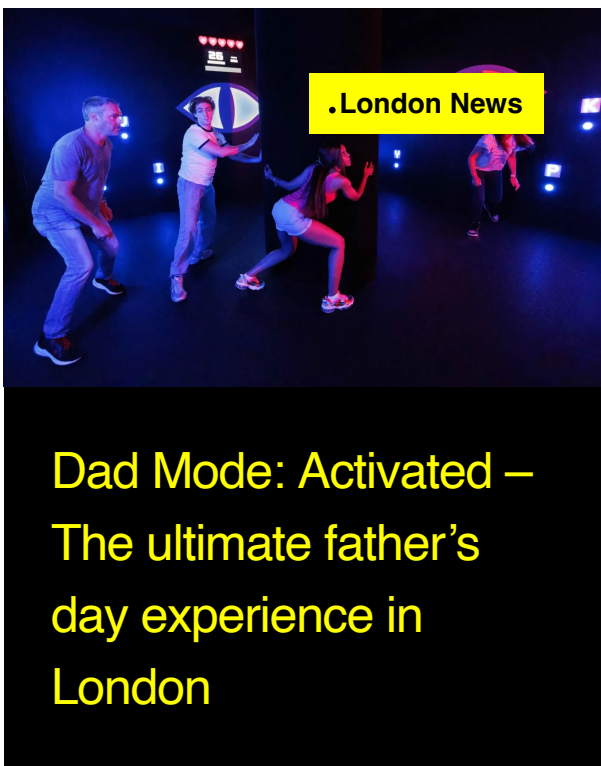

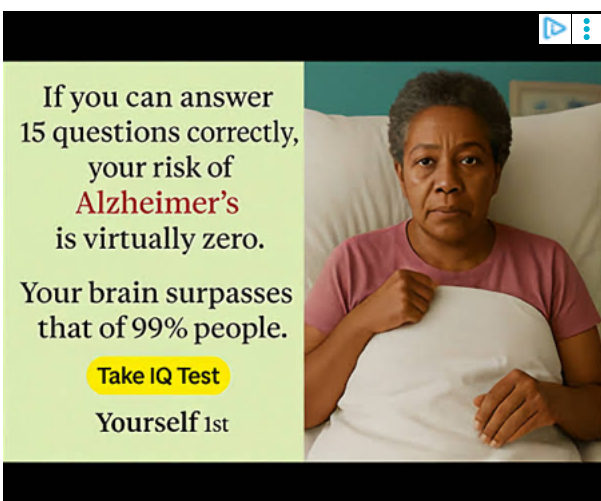

Hanneke Beaumont’s work has featured at leading art fairs including TEFAF Maastricht, Frieze, Art Miami, BRAFA, and The Winter Show in New York, consistently attracting collectors, curators, and critics alike.

Hanneke Beaumont: Sculpting the Universal Self also reflects a longstanding relationship between the artist and Bowman Sculpture. Since their first collaboration in the early 1990s, the gallery has championed Beaumont’s vision across numerous major exhibitions, including Bronze 25 & 26 (Connected and Disconnected) at Frederik Meijer Gardens & Sculpture Park in the United States.

The exhibition brings together a curated selection of 26 works spanning Beaumont’s career. Highlights include several brand-new sculptures, among them the debut of Bronze 161 (Duality), a monumental work that captures the artist’s enduring exploration of opposing forces—strength and vulnerability, connection and solitude—within the universal self. These are shown alongside key earlier pieces, including the final available casts of Bronze 71 (2005, edition 8/8) and Bronze 45(1998, edition 8/8), offering a rare opportunity to view the arc of Beaumont’s practice across time.

A full-colour catalogue accompanies the exhibition, featuring a foreword by Mica Bowman and further insights into Beaumont’s practice.

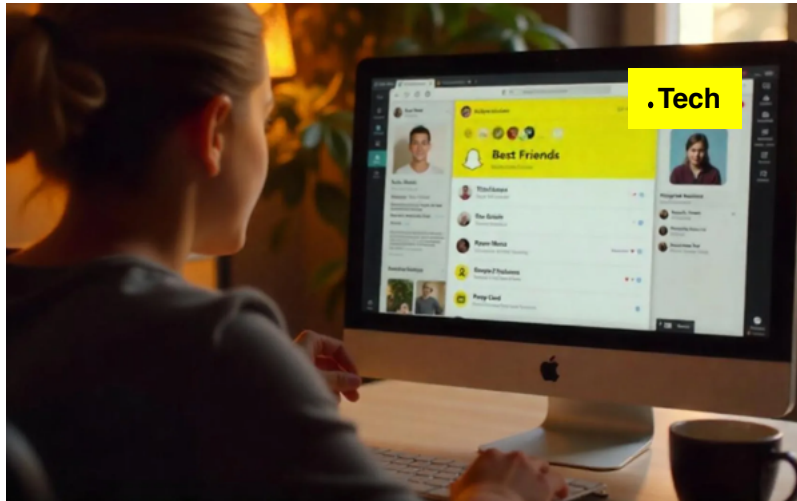

For more information go to: <https://bowmansculpture.com/>

Top 5 side hustles for retirees

Drew Pritchard's new wife: An insight into the life of the antique dealer and his love story

Snapchat best friends list checker: How to see someone's best friends

What is Pulse Mode on a Geek Bar?

ToFro exchange unveils cutting-edge technology to deliver fast, secure, and legitimate digital asset trading

The world's 12 richest plastic surgeons—and why only 14% are women

How to save disappearing photos in Instagram DMs: A step-by-step guide

Secret towns, scenic trails & untouched nature: A different Algarve awaits

